"Rules for Disproving a Conclusion in Syllogism"

How to Break a Conclusion:

- If a conclusion is even 1% positive, you must prove it 100% negative to break it.
- If a conclusion is even 1% negative, you must prove it 100% positive to break it.

Possibility in Syllogism:

- If two statements do not have a negative relationship, then a possibility condition may exist, depending on their logical structure
- If there is a possibility, we cannot decide whether the conclusion is right or wrong.
- Not considering a conclusion means we cannot confirm or reject it, but it does not mean it is correct.

Complementary Pairs in Syllogism (Either-Or Condition)

- Both conclusions must be individually false (neither should be 100% correct).
- The conclusions must be opposite (one affirms, the other denies)
- If there is a possibility and both statements talk about the same thing in opposite ways, the answer is "Either-Or"

Some → No

Some Not → All

- (A) Only (1) conclusion follows
- (B) Only (2) conclusion follows
- (C) Either (1) or (2) follows
- (D) Neither (1) nor (2) follows
- (E) Both (1) and (2) follow
